5 Frequently Asked Questions

5.1 What is considered as an aborted lease eligible for remission of stamp duty?

An aborted lease is a lease rescinded after it is executed or signed. To be eligible for remission of stamp duty, the lease must be rescinded on or after 19 February 2011, before the commencement date of the lease and it has not been made use of by either parties. The lease should not be rescinded with the view to facilitate the lease of the property by the lessor to another person. Application for remission must be made within six months from the date of rescission.

5.2 I have entered into a lease with my landlord for a lease term of 3 years. I have decided to abort the lease after occupying the premise for 1 year. Am I eligible for remission of stamp duty?

No, you are not eligible for remission of stamp duty as the lease period of the premise has commenced.

The remission is not intended for lessees or tenants who have derived economic benefits from the leased space.

5.3 I have entered into a lease with my landlord where the terms in the contract allow me to carry out fitting out works before the commencement of the lease. I have carried out the fitting out works but decided to abort the lease before the lease commencement date. Am I eligible for remission of stamp duty?

No, you are not eligible for remission of stamp duty as you have made use of the lease contract when you carried out the fitting out works.
